RESEARCH INTERESTS

- My thesis, entitled Interdisciplinary Transfer and Cultivation: How Vocal, Writing, and Visual Arts Can Inform Horn Practice and Performance, introduces an approach to learning that seeks to find connectivity among the arts and to deepen musical connection and understanding within the context of horn pedagogy by engagement with vocal, writing, and visual art techniques. I developed an institution review board approved workshop to test these Interdisciplinary Transfer and Cultivation [ITC] ideas with a group of undergraduate horn students, and I describe their experiences with that workshop in my paper.
- I am developing a workbook that will guide students through various ITC exercises with and without the horn that will encourage them towards a deeper connection with their music and give them ownership over their own learning styles, assessment of their progress, and a deeper level of investment and motivation in their horn studies.
